

Working with DataHub

This section further explains synchronization, how to track it, recursive synchronization, and options available for synchronization. There are also scenarios to help you understand synchronization better. You will explore more about a variety of schema mapping options, which include checking and updating changes in nodes, exclusion of nodes from data copying, data hierarchy synchronization, group type mapping, and more details about the Defining the target type from an attribute's value option.

Related pages

- How synchronization works
- More synchronization and Schema Mapping options