

Flow Specification

A Flow Specification specifies inputs and outputs as a set of flow properties that list can be displayed in a flow properties compartment. A flow specification is used to type Flow Ports, in order to specify items which can flow via the ports.

 Flow Specification is deprecated in accordance with SysML specification and is defined for backward compatibility.

Related diagrams

- SysML Block Definition Diagram